Section AAnswer Question 01.

Source A

From a speech made by Henry VIII to his nobility and councillors, 8 November 1528.

When we remember that we must die, we think that all our doings in our life are not worthy of memory, if we leave trouble at the time of our death. For if one's true heir be not known at the time of one's death, what mischief and trouble shall follow for others and their children? And, although it has pleased Almighty God to send a fair daughter, born of a noble woman and me and begotten to our great comfort and joy; yet it has been told us that neither is she our lawful daughter, nor her mother a lawful wife, but that we live together abominably and detestably in open adultery.

Source B

From the Succession to the Crown Act, 1534. This Act was drafted by Cromwell.

We, your most obedient subjects, do most humbly beseech Your Highness that the marriage solemnised between Your Highness and the Lady Catherine shall be, by the authority of this present Parliament, deemed utterly void and annulled. The marriage solemnised between Your Highness and the most entirely beloved Queen Anne shall be considered lawful. For the establishment of the succession of Your Most Royal Majesty, the heirs of Henry and Anne shall be recognised.

All the nobles of your realm, spiritual and temporal, and all other subjects, shall be required to make an oath that they shall keep the whole of this present Act. If any persons refuse so to do they will be punished for high treason.
